

Knowledge is power. That is just what we have been stressing this week at Lakeview Elementary. Parent Power Hours have been a hit with your children this week. (Second and Kindergarten Grades are still coming in November.) In speaking with several children at different grade levels, they were very proud and said they had a lot of fun having their parents in class with them. The whole purpose of Parent Power Hour is to help parents help their children. We trust you learned a few new tricks in regard to helping your child academically. We hope this opportunity was just as exciting and worthwhile for you the parents. Students are putting forth their best efforts this week participating in state assessments, better known as MEAPS. Proper eating and sleeping will help students perform to their highest potential. Being on time to school and coming with a confident attitude can make all the difference in the world. MEAP testing will continue through next week. Keep up the fabulous effort!

There is power in numbers. We are a very large elementary school here at Lakeview, but when you put so many great people together working toward a common goal, that goal is definitely within reach. From fundraising, to safety, to academics, when many people work hard, the goals are reached and it isn't too daunting for just a few.

The power of praise, support and attitude is immeasurable. Research shows that authentic and fitting praise can eliminate poor self-esteem and self-doubt. Please try to attend the scheduled award program for your child. It is so important that we provide positive reinforcements so our children feel empowered to succeed in school and social settings.

"Building understanding, support and acceptance begins with earning trust."
~David Cottrell

It warms my heart to walk through the halls of Lakeview School and receive such warm greetings from our little ones. The little smiles, waves, and high fives from Lakeview students are my favorite parts of each day. I am so pleased to see such happy children in our building because it shows me that they know that they are understood, supported, and accepted as a part of the Lakeview community. These feelings are what bring about the trust both you and your child(ren) can have in the people who work so hard to make each day at Lakeview School one that is filled with excitement, knowledge, and fun! We love our students and it shows through the trusting relationships we share with our youngsters!
